

Association for the Deaf, agreed with Cherry.

“Educationally, the problems of the deaf and blind require two entirely different types of specialization,” he said.

At present, Virginia’s two schools for the physically handicapped—at Staunton and Hampton—are combined facilities for both deaf and blind children.